FEDA acknowledges that during the first three months of 2022 the company has had an additional cost of approximately 12 million euros for the acquisition of electricity from neighboring countries. This was stated by the director general of electricity, Albert Moles, after stressing that the visibility of the situation in relation to the rise and fall of tariffs, from now on, is not at all «clear». Following the same line, the Minister of the Environment, Agriculture and Sustainability, Silvia Calvo, added that this increase is due to the problem of French nuclear power plants and the impact on European countries resulting from the war in Ukraine.

During Moles' appearance before the legislative committee of the General Council, the director of the company explained the trajectory that electricity has followed in relation to investment policies and the increase in tariffs over the last two years. In this regard, FEDA stressed that the long-term supply contracts, which it signed in 2019 with Spain and France in order to guarantee electricity at a closed price for the next 10 years, «we have amortized the rise in price and they are competitively priced and much more affordable than in neighboring countries», which are precisely the main suppliers. He also stressed that, in relative terms, the increase in electricity will increase the bill by eight euros per month, while in countries such as Spain it will be 100 euros per month.

As for the future vision of the electricity company, Moles warned that focusing the investment and research efforts exclusively on electricity is a «mistake». In fact, the director of the company spoke about the need for the country to diversify energy sources in order to find «new ways more accessible to all and slow down the growth of electricity demand.» In this regard, he highlighted the proliferation of biomass and biogas for the future to complement electricity. He also noted the growing interest in hydrogen as a source of energy, but noted that «it is still uncertain and has 10 or 15 years left to be 100% operational».

On the other hand, during the course of the appearance, the president of the Social Democratic Party (PS), Pere López, pointed out that «the million-dollar investments of the subsidiary companies of FEDA have not had an adequate return on the amount of resources allocated». In turn, Calvo replied that these managements of the heat networks distributed in different parts of the country «go beyond the return on investment because they seek to do a service to the public by reducing the demand for electric heating and, thus, cause a decrease in prices.

Finally, Calvo emphasized that the economic impact of the part exposed to market prices is very important due to the great volatility that prices are suffering and «it is not clear whether we will continue the same dynamic of assuming additional costs until the end of the year». But it all depends on the context of the war and the situation of the suppliers. He also highlighted the problem of the proliferation of electric cars in terms of «the shortage of charging points, which must be used for emergencies and tourists». ≡

The government has authorized the residence of 225 people from Ukraine out of a total of 240 who have applied for it and are pending resolution. These 240 people are part of 98 households, which have already been interviewed to meet their needs and provide the best service. There are also 62 schoolchildren, 38 of whom have chosen the Andorran education system, 20 French and 4 Spanish. In terms of aid, the Executive has also provided 64 pre-paid cards to spend on supermarkets, 79 on public transport and 54 on Andorra Telecom. It should be noted that most of these families are temporarily in the homes of relatives or friends, but there are also those who have been exceptionally given private tourist accommodation. A situation that could be complicated in the coming weeks, as with the arrival of good weather and the summer season these landlords will want to rent them out. In this sense, the Minister of Education and Higher Education, Ester Vilarrubla, who before yesterday exercised the functions of Minister Spokesman to replace Eric Jover, said that «case by case» is being studied, but that «at the moment, we can't give a global answer.»

Regarding a hypothetical increase in the number of people welcomed, Vilarrubla recalled that the limit has been set at 250, although «when the time comes it will be seen if it can be expanded». «In any case, it will be analyzed from a human perspective as the war progresses,» he added.

travel to Lublin, three for the trailer and two for the support vehicle, an interpreter and an NGO delegate.

The Red Cross also stated that in view of the large amount of material they are receiving from the public, work is beginning on the organization of a fifth and final humanitarian convoy. Finally, as in the last expedition, it is not planned to move new refugees to the Principality. ≡
